Our Signature Massage

$89 for 60 minutes

$135 for 90 minutes

The most commonly known and used form of massage in the U.S., this Swedish massage employs vibration, tapping, kneading, stroking and friction to relax muscles and enhance oxygen flow. This technique promotes flexibility and relaxation, eases aches and pains and is even being researched for its benefits to osteoarthritis patients. It involves long gliding strokes, usually with oil, along the muscles.

Deep Tissue Massage

$89 (60 minutes only)

People with sports injuries and joint conditions tend to benefit from connective tissue massage. This type of massage focuses on the connective tissues, which fill the spaces between muscles and fibers and injure easily. The strokes in this massage are slow and involve intense pressure, warming the muscle tissue. The technique can break up scar tissue and relieve chronic tension.

Prenatal, Postpartum Massage

$89 (60 minutes only)

During pregnancy, a woman's weight gain puts strain on her body, especially her back. Massage can ease discomfort, relieve tension and increase blood circulation, as well as reduce fatigue. After birth, it can be used to help women realign their body skeletal system and release muscle tension. These kinds of massages often use a customized Swedish technique. (Initial may be only 45 minutes depending on pregnancy status)

Lymphatic

$99 (Introductory Rate/60 Minutes)

$149 (90 Minutes)

Massage therapists use manual lymphatic drainage to manipulate the body's lymph flow through a technique of rhythmic pumping. The lymphatic system helps the body filter out toxins. When clogged, it can lead to pain and soreness. This type of massage has been shown to help heal acute injuries, heal the skin and prevent illness. Drinking water will aid in the process of flushing out your system.
